All members unanimously agreed that a master programme on occupational health and safety was the need of the hour. They expressed that the programme must have hands on practical training as an essential component of this programme. Different areas like, health, ergonomics, communication, legislation, gender, safety etc. need to be included in this programme. The programme would be developed in line with the NEP guidelines having multiple entry and exit options. The programme would have both core and elective courses. Keeping the eligibility as any graduate the programme will help to cater to the needs of different target groups working for their skill enhancement as well as help them for seeking job in the formal and non-formal industry. All the members gave their commitment for their association with the programme for providing inputs as and when required,
